Setting the Scene

HIGH ENERGY

A sinuous bench of cedar and Fireslate that begins inches wide and ends at a comfortable depth for sitting winds the length of a long, narrow roof terrace overlooking Boston's Public Garden. Zinc planters hold boxwood, flowering ornamental trees and a host of perennials and annuals for year-round beauty. Photography by Warren Patterson

Location: Boston

“Our charge was to create something beautiful to look at year-round, that was functional and that was a bit edgier than the expected.” —Gregory Lombardi
